Excerpt: .are not to be considered in interpreting the character of the preceding narrative. For the Pueblo myth, however, this line of argument is not conclusive. A definite refutation of the naturalistic theory depends on the available material. It is demonstrable that all the trial-incidents found in the Pueblo versions are also found in other combinations. It has also been shown that none of the adventures related in the second part can be used to enforce the naturalistic argument based on the initial portion. Nevertheless, we are still confronted by the combination of the testtheme with the visit to the sky, descent from the sun, and magical birth. In Pueblo mythology there are not, as on the North Pacific coast, human heroes undergoing precisely the same adventures as the Sun s children; nor can it be directly proved, as in the case of the Star-Boy and BloodClot cycle, that so-called criteria have combined secondarily. My objection to the naturalistic interpretation of this case rests on the general principle that no criteria distinguishing celestial from human heroes exist, that explicit solar connections are accordingly insignificant. This principle, already illustrated by a limited number of examples, is most conclusively established by the proof that an indifferent tale may, as in the myth of Qais, acquire a celestial aspect. In the same way it is possible to dispose of the theory that in some cases the plot has a solely explanatory function. When it is shown that celestial...
