Excerpt: .dose at 10 cm. below the skin surface is 130 per It is very important that the walls of the ionization chamber be constructed of material having an average low atomic weight, approximating as far as possible the composition of tissue. Kroenig and Friedrich first employed aluminum (at. wt. 27) but found that the graphited horn gave better results. In most of the older work this important point has been neglected. and therefore the older data are not directly comparable with Friedrich and Kroenig s. Figure 3.
