A thin veil of mist seemed almost to cover the earth and shut out the light of day. People walking along the streets of London apparently were affected by the dingy atmosphere. There was a listlessness in their actions which at first sight seemed to be due to the depression cast by the low-banging clouds. A second glance, however, convinced Earl Platt that there was another and a deeper reason for the apparent lack of activity among the pedestrians on Victoria Street. It was now the middle of August, 1914. For two weeks England had been at war with Germany. The anxiety aroused by such a condition naturally was manifest among the English people. A little slow to awaken to the seriousness of the conflict into which they had thrown themselves, they nevertheless were surely and steadily beginning to assert their power.
