Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Of Ten Years Missionary Labour in India: Between 1852 and 1861, Prepared From Local Reports and Original Letters More than 4600 miles of trunk-lines have been planned at a cost of 55,000,000l. sterling, of which the great line from Bombay to Calcutta, across the hitherto closed tracks of Central India will bring the capital of the empire at least five days nearer to England than it has ever been. By these great lines, when fully completed, and fed by branch railways, tramways, and roads, a compactness and unity will be given to the Empire, and to its numerous wide-spread provinces, of the most surprising kind. The first section of line was opened at Bombay in 1853; forty miles of the East Indian Railway near Calcutta speedily followed. But the first line completed from end to end was the the South-Western of Madras. By May 1862, 1630 miles were opened, to which 1300 miles have just been added in the cold season at the end of the year. The remaining 1800 are in process of construction, and will (it is believed) be completed within two years. It is not improbable that at the close of the present year the line from Calcutta to Delhi, the trunk line of the Gangetic Valley, will be traversed from end to end, except at the river Jumna, where a steam ferry will, for the present, occupy the place of the unfinished bridge; while, at the same time, the Bombay line will be completed to the city of Nagpore. The natives are enthusiastic in favour of railway travelling especially in the Presidency of Bengal. They readily adopt it wherever it is...
