This book is definitely not effortless to start on reading through but extremely fun to learn. Better then never, though i am quite late in start reading this one. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

We may with profit take a look at the life and ways of some of our common birds, and study with a growing interest a few of the parts that characterize them and that fit them so perfectly for their life in the air. There is a perpetual interest centering in the study of the adaptation and fitness of the varied forms of life as it may be seen about every home, be it ever so humble, and that, too, with no other equipment than ones eyes and patience. Fortunate is that person whose home or school life has been of such a character as to develop a love for the beautiful in nature. He may drink from the same fountain with poets and artists, and picture to himself the greatest works of art, and read first hand the most beautiful poems in all the realms of literature. So it is with everything; so it is with the birds. The interest they excite is of all grades, from that which looks upon them as items of millinery, up to that of the makers of ornithological systems, and who ransack the world for specimens, and who have no doubt that the chief end of a bird is to be named and catalogued - the more synonyms the better.
